

PHOTOS FROM THE WORLD

PARIS GAY AFTER SUMMER'S SLEEP

Thousands Soon Will Return from Watering Places and Mountains.

STIR AMONG AVIATORS

Safety Device, Which Recently Was Successfully Tested, Will Revolutionize Flying.

Special Cable to The Washington Herald.
Paris, Aug. 23.—Seldom, if ever, has this city been so dull—so almost dead—as during the last week.

Life seemed to have deserted Paris. The hotels were empty and the amusements of the city had lost their power. Now slowly but surely the town is waking from its summer sleep; another week will bring back many thousands, and once again the streets and cafes will be thronged.

Deauville's season is now winding fast. It has been most prosperous for the rich monopolist who runs the chief hotels. Anna Held and Lillian Russell, who in private life are Mrs. Moore, could tell some interesting stories of prices paid at Deauville.

Thirty-seven francs ($7.40) for four cups of coffee and four rolls was charged Anna Held at one hotel, and to 100 or even 125 francs a day was asked for moderately sized rooms. The races and gambling tables flourished like the proverbial green bay tree. On the night of the Grand Prix de Deauville, the Casino represented that profits of the Casino management were over 750,000 francs ($150,000).

Airship Device Successful.

The aviation world is deeply interested in the experiments made lately with the Bennett parachute. It is hoped that by this new device the appalling loss of life in aviation accidents may be diminished.

The French military authorities, however, are only half convinced by the successful test of the parachute the other day at Chateaufort.

All inventors do not have a rosy time with French authorities. M. L'Herminier, convinced us of this truth. Not long ago, it seems, the Ministry of Marine sent expert delegates to visit the inventor of the L'Herminier ray, to test the power of the L'Herminier ray. The inventor, the L'Herminier ray, which the inventor used as his workshop, they are said to have handled him some metal cans supposed to contain the L'Herminier ray. They invited him to blow up by means of the ray. Suspecting a trap, M. L'Herminier and his henchmen, they found, were empty. The delegates were promptly sent ashore, and now are sneering at the invention.

It is reported that Miss Gordon's alleged loss of voice may last much longer than was expected. The time of her breakdown during the rehearsals of "The Jewels of the Madonna" here.

Miss Gordon was in Scotland when I telephoned to her Paris apartment, but she announced that she and her husband would be replaced in the approaching production of "The Jewels of the Madonna" by a new debutante named Vally, and by the time "The Jewels of the Madonna" appears to contain certain details.

John Richards' translation, or new version, of "Machbeth" will be produced next season at the Theatre Francaise.

Hugo Stange for Victor Hugo, which secured the recent edition of French artists, it is to be sent to Germany as a gift of the French government. It shows the poet's passion on a mass of rock, and is a work of genius.

Harry Littleton, who defended Harry Thaw, will pass some days in London before sailing for New York, after three months stay in Europe.

Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt made a brief stop in Paris this week before departing for London to recuperate from the recent fatigues of the season at Deauville. Many of Mrs. Vanderbilt's horses, now at Deauville, are coming home, and the Vanderbilt colors are not likely to be seen at the Hippodrome.

Americans motoring over Continental roads have been in large numbers here this week. Many halted at Tours, among them Mr. and Mrs. H. Kennedy Hill, Henry C. Rogers, Mrs. G. J. Gould, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Smith, and Mrs. W. L. Shaver, and Mrs. A. W. Pope, of New York; Mrs. W. L. Latham, of Baltimore, and Mrs. R. Merrill, of Buffalo.

Countess Mervill, of Washington, arrived at the Hotel Imperial from Versailles, and will shortly return to America. George Tyler is again at his favorite Paris haunts and the Hotel Crillon, after taking the cure at Contrexeville.

Mrs. John King Van Rensselaer, who is equally popular in New York, Newport, and Philadelphia, has provided interest in the suffrage cause by inventing a new game of cards, which she will name after "The Cause."

Titta Ruffo, the barytone, is again due at the Grand Hotel, after a successful season at San Sebastian.

Mrs. William Elletts Corey has been winning laurels lately at the Deauville Casino as an exponent of the tango.

MRS. PANKHURST DENIES RETIREMENT REPORT

Again Will Lead Militants When She Regains Health, She Says from $20-a-Day French Hotel.

Trouville, France, Aug. 23.—"That is a lie," cried Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, founder of militant methods in the English suffrage movement, when she heard today of a rumor current in London that she had deserted the cause. "I am going back when I regain my health and will again lead the forces of militancy," said Mrs. Pankhurst, who is president of the Women's Social and Political Union.

Mrs. Pankhurst, who has spent most of the last three years in jail fighting against forcible feeding, is living at the Hotel Des Roches Noires, which costs $2 a day. This hotel is regarded as expensive even in this notoriously costly resort. Mrs. Pankhurst's meals are served in her apartment and consist of the most delectable dainties that the highest-priced chefs on the Continent can devise. She is accompanied by a maid, a valet, a cook, a rich woman who is interested in suffrage. Mrs. Doggett has contributed $500 to the suffrage cause in England.

TURKS INVADE BULGARIA.

Protest to Powers.

Sofia, Aug. 23.—Turkish troops have invaded Bulgaria. Dispatches received here today from the frontier, stated that a Turkish army has entered this country at Kirk Jalk and that the population is fleeing into the interior.

Bulgaria has made formal protest to the powers against the action of Turkey.

ENJOYS SOCIAL TRIUMPHS.

Carries Regular Equipment, Weighing About Seventy-Five Pounds, and Serves as Private.

Special Cable to The Washington Herald.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 23.—Under the title "A Crowned Private," interesting particulars are just published here relating to the march made by the Emperor Nicholas as a fully-accoutred private in campaigning outfit, in order to gain personal experience of the toils and duties of the Russian common soldier.

The czar carried the usual rolled overcoat, pouches with 120 rounds of ammunition, trenching spade, ration bag, etc., altogether nearly three-quarters of a hundredweight, exclusive of the weight of the rifle.

His majesty marched up hill and down dale for seven miles, giving the salute of a private soldier to the officers whom he met on the way.

Next day he entered himself, according to the regulations, on the regimental rolls as "Private Nicholas Romanoff," married of the Orthodox faith, coming from Tarkosko Selo.

On that occasion, the American ambassador, Mr. Belmont, was present, and the czar, on the royal yacht, the Albatross, was accompanied by his wife and children.

During the march, the czar was accompanied by his private, who carried his equipment, and by a number of other officials.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

CZAR, AS SOLDIER, MARCHES SEVEN MILES

Carries Regular Equipment, Weighing About Seventy-Five Pounds, and Serves as Private.

Special Cable to The Washington Herald.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 23.—Under the title "A Crowned Private," interesting particulars are just published here relating to the march made by the Emperor Nicholas as a fully-accoutred private in campaigning outfit, in order to gain personal experience of the toils and duties of the Russian common soldier.

The czar carried the usual rolled overcoat, pouches with 120 rounds of ammunition, trenching spade, ration bag, etc., altogether nearly three-quarters of a hundredweight, exclusive of the weight of the rifle.

His majesty marched up hill and down dale for seven miles, giving the salute of a private soldier to the officers whom he met on the way.

Next day he entered himself, according to the regulations, on the regimental rolls as "Private Nicholas Romanoff," married of the Orthodox faith, coming from Tarkosko Selo.

On that occasion, the American ambassador, Mr. Belmont, was present, and the czar, on the royal yacht, the Albatross, was accompanied by his wife and children.

During the march, the czar was accompanied by his private, who carried his equipment, and by a number of other officials.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

The czar's march was a success, and he was well received by the people.

ALBANIA'S FATE EUROPE'S TASK

Nations Worried Over Problem of Organization of New State.

CHURCHMAN GIVES VIEW

Years Will Pass Before Country Can Enjoy Blessings of Civilization, He Says.

Special Cable to The Washington Herald.

Rome, Aug. 23.—Mr. James Seregi, the eminent Albanian Archbishop of Scutari, was a recent visitor at the Vatican, where he was received by the Holy Father and Cardinal Del Val, the Papal Secretary of State, to whom he made a full detailed report of existing conditions in the newly born State of Albania.

Later, in a talk with a correspondent, the Archbishop said the world must not entertain glowing hopes as to the future of Albania, as it will be years before his unhappy country can enjoy the blessings of civilization.

According to the Archbishop, the organization of the new State will be one of the hardest problems with which modern civilization can be confronted. Whether the great powers will succeed in restoring peace to that troubled country and in organizing it in a way that will prevent internal discord depends wholly on the spirit with which they undertake the extremely delicate task.

Helpless as Children.

"Albania, or rather the territory within the borders of the new nation by the Archbishop Seregi said, 'can be compared to a group of children with whom their tender mother must deal according to their needs, their age, and mental development.'

"Will the nations most directly interested in the future of Albania set aside their aspirations for economic and political expansion and confine their efforts to insuring the welfare of the country?"

The Archbishop refused to give his views on the surrender of Scutari to the Montenegrins, saying history would in time reveal many facts of which the world is still ignorant.

Scutari Is in Ruins.

"The old Scutari," he said, "is now a wilderness of dilapidated buildings and black ruins. The marks of the long siege will be visible for years to come, and some of them are indelible. The Cathedral was hit by forty shells from siege guns of large caliber."

"Today a ragged population of men, women and children, impoverished by the last days of Ottoman rule, roam through the ruins, helpless from months of suffering."

Exquisite Statue of Goddess.

Kwan-Yin, goddess of mercy and grace, is an exquisite figure molded from the clay by the medium of silk, heavily and richly lacquered in a light bronze color. The figure stands upon a sacred lotus flower, surrounded by waves of blue, purple and red.

Shen Shiao An's patent was due to the discovery of combining pure gold with certain pigments and resin of trees, which, being placed upon specially prepared wood and reacted upon by the atmosphere, produced the most beautiful and curious color effects, equal in lustre and beauty to the finest porcelain or fine cloisonne. They were softer in tone, however, and of surpassing smoothness.

Truly, the art of the Shen family has been a secret of the family for three centuries, and no one has yet successfully imitated the Shen family lacquer. The lacquer, which stands at the head of Chinese art.

One Artist Designs Her Costume for Picking Shells by Seashore and Another Paints Her.

Special Cable to The Washington Herald.

Paris, Aug. 23.—If Mrs. Craig Biddle, of Philadelphia, does not have the most picturesque portrait in next year's salon it will not be the fault of her artistic husband. She is being painted at Trouville gathering shells by the shore.

A special seaside costume has been designed for her, even to the most minute details.

Not merely the colors of dress and hat and shoes and sunshade and pet dog deluxe have been taken into consideration, but the artist who designed her costume took into account the varying moods of the sky above and of the sparkling sea. All this was done by way of preparation under the direction of Mrs. Biddle.

She has had one artist for the preparation, or mise en scene, and another for the portrait. Count Charles de Chabannes de Polin, member of the Jury of the Salon of French Artists and painter of the beautiful portrait of Her Majesty the Dowager Queen of Greece, is the artist who is painting Mrs. Biddle by the sea.

During his recent visit to America the count painted half a dozen portraits of beautiful women.

SAYS BEEF EXTRACT CAUSES INTOXICATION

British Medical Man Declares It Produces Same Effects as Alcoholic Poisoning.

Special Cable to The Washington Herald.

London, Aug. 23.—A Liverpool doctor declares all the symptoms of alcoholic poisoning are caused by the consumption of a favorite restaurant beverage, and to say that it produces a special kind of intoxication is somewhat of a paradox.

A patient of whose habits there could be no question went to the Liverpool doctor with every sign of alcoholic poisoning, and an inquiry proved definitely that his state resulted solely from a habit he had formed of taking meat juices in several forms.

Some rather amusing cases, says the expert, have occurred from eating excessive, though not apparently bulky, portions of cereal foods.

Around-Britain Flight Postponed.

Yarmouth, England, Aug. 23.—The hydro-aeroplane flight around Great Britain, which started last Saturday at Southampton, has been indefinitely postponed because of bad weather.

ANKLET STOCKINGS APPEAR IN LONDON

Latest Freak of Fashion Sells as High as $200 a Pair—Costly Fabrics Used.

Special Cable to The Washington Herald.

London, Aug. 23.—Ankle bracelet stockings are the newest fashion freaks for London's smart society women.

This fad is a modification of the jeweled bands and golden anklets so popular in a certain section of Parisian society. The new dainties are of black silk with a wide band, embroidered in blue, green, yellow or purple silk, encircling the ankle.

The advent of the slashed skirt is responsible for the changes in hosiery. The shorter the skirt the brighter the stocking.

One enterprising dealer has brought over from Paris dainty hosiery with jewels slashed around the ankle, the sparkle and color being plainly seen through the thin silken mesh. As much as $200 is asked for a pair. These are made of fine gold tissue and real lace, chintilly and mechin being the popular fabrics.

RARE CHINESE ART ON SHOW IN LONDON

Wonderful Specimens of Shen Shiao An's Gold Lacquer Attract Crowds.

ON EXHIBITION FOR FIRST TIME

Special Cable to The Washington Herald.

London, Aug. 23.—Very little is known about the famous gold lacquer of Foochow. In consequence of the unrest and trouble through which China has been passing, a collection of this lacquer has found its way to London for the first time.

Debenham and Freebury, in Wigmore Street, W., are now exhibiting a splendid collection of these unique and superb works of Chinese art.

Hundreds of people are going to see the ware daily, and are delighted with some of the most beautiful specimens ever shown in England. The pieces, for the most part, run in pairs, with prices from $5 to $500. One or two of the large silver jars are valued at $1,000 or more.

It is impossible to exaggerate the beauty in coloring and the delicacy in outline of many of these vessels. There is a peacock jar in blue-green lacquer, which is superbly decorated, having the bird standing on a rock beneath a willow and branches of the plum with sprays of the peony, among which flutter gorgeous butterflies and insects.

Another very beautiful jar is pear-shaped, the foundation color being an exquisite translucent pale silver blue. The decoration consists of two Ho-Ho birds.

Exquisite Statue of Goddess.

Kwan-Yin, goddess of mercy and grace, is an exquisite figure molded from the clay by the medium of silk, heavily and richly lacquered in a light bronze color. The figure stands upon a sacred lotus flower, surrounded by waves of blue, purple and red.

Shen Shiao An's patent was due to the discovery of combining pure gold with certain pigments and resin of trees, which, being placed upon specially prepared wood and reacted upon by the atmosphere, produced the most beautiful and curious color effects, equal in lustre and beauty to the finest porcelain or fine cloisonne. They were softer in tone, however, and of surpassing smoothness.

Truly, the art of the Shen family has been a secret of the family for three centuries, and no one has yet successfully imitated the Shen family lacquer. The lacquer, which stands at the head of Chinese art.

One Artist Designs Her Costume for Picking Shells by Seashore and Another Paints Her.

Special Cable to The Washington Herald.

Paris, Aug. 23.—If Mrs. Craig Biddle, of Philadelphia, does not have the most picturesque portrait in next year's salon it will not be the fault of her artistic husband. She is being painted at Trouville gathering shells by the shore.

A special seaside costume has been designed for her, even to the most minute details.

Not merely the colors of dress and hat and shoes and sunshade and pet dog deluxe have been taken into consideration, but the artist who designed her costume took into account the varying moods of the sky above and of the sparkling sea. All this was done by way of preparation under the direction of Mrs. Biddle.

She has had one artist for the preparation, or mise en scene, and another for the portrait. Count Charles de Chabannes de Polin, member of the Jury of the Salon of French Artists and painter of the beautiful portrait of Her Majesty the Dowager Queen of Greece, is the artist who is painting Mrs. Biddle by the sea.

During his recent visit to America the count painted half a dozen portraits of beautiful women.

SAYS BEEF EXTRACT CAUSES INTOXICATION

British Medical Man Declares It Produces Same Effects as Alcoholic Poisoning.

Special Cable to The Washington Herald.

London, Aug. 23.—A Liverpool doctor declares all the symptoms of alcoholic poisoning are caused by the consumption of a favorite restaurant beverage, and to say that it produces a special kind of intoxication is somewhat of a paradox.

A patient of whose habits there could be no question went to the Liverpool doctor with every sign of alcoholic poisoning, and an inquiry proved definitely that his state resulted solely from a habit he had formed of taking meat juices in several forms.

Some rather amusing cases, says the expert, have occurred from eating excessive, though not apparently bulky, portions of cereal foods.

Around-Britain Flight Postponed.

Yarmouth, England, Aug. 23.—The hydro-aeroplane flight around Great Britain, which started last Saturday at Southampton, has been indefinitely postponed because of bad weather.

MILITARY GENIUS OF BALKANS.

Thronging in Vain Besiege European Steamship Offices for Passage.

Full Till September

Many Delay for Shooting in the North, Which Needs Fat Purse.

Special Cable to The Washington Herald.

London, Aug. 23.—George Ade remarked recently: "I should think an Englishman would feel lonely in London these days." This describes the situation exactly, for London today is a veritable limbo for the friendly foreigners, most of whom are Americans.

The annual homeward rush has begun, and the steamship offices in the neighborhood of Cockspur Street daily are filled with anxious tourists eager to get home only to be told in a majority of cases, "Sorry, but we are full up until the end of September."

It is strange that a large number of travelers wait almost until the last moment before going to secure return accommodations; hence inevitable disappointment and in some cases even more serious results.

Mrs. Bradley-Martin wishes to be known in future as Mrs. C. S. Bradley-Martin; that is Mrs. Cornelia Sherman Bradley-Martin, in order to be distinguished from her daughter-in-law, who is now to be called Mrs. Bradley-Martin.

"Shooting" is